About the Competition

NPAs or Non Performing Assets of banks and financial institutions in India is a major issue today which has reached about Rs.10 lac crores . On one side, industry is not doing well for the last few years, on the other side, economy slow down all over the world , is putting pressure on all economic parameters like growth in GDP, employment, manufacturing index etc.

Erosion of capital due to mounting NPAs is a major worry for banks. RBI is becoming tough on banks for taking actions on NPAs. New Reforms in banking and financial sectors are introduced to put actions on NPAs on fast track. These include new Bankruptcy code, Financial Resolution and Deposit Insurance Bill etc.

Actions suggested for NPAs recovery mainly focus on liquidation of assets and collaterals. But many times, these actions may result in stoppage of production all together, loss of employments, loss of revenue to exchequer etc. This actually could be counter productive, and emerging global economy like India perhaps cannot afford it.

Research paper should aim at addressing above mentioned issues and also taking global clues as to what other countries are doing to solve the issue, what could be more appropriate to India, is there any policy change required, is any 'out of box 'action oriented policy to be formulated.

The research papers can have following subthemes:

- Solutions for controlling NPAs
- Basel III norms and NPAs
- Current economic conditions and NPAs
- Sectoral classifications of NPAs
- Internal V/s External factors for NPAs
- Are banks responsible for the crisis of NPAs

Students are invited to present their in depth analysis on the theme of research paper competition.

Objectives:

To create a platform for undergraduate and post graduate students below the age of 25 years to share and exchange their views on current NPAs scenario.

Call for Papers:

Research papers are invited from students from educational institutions, students pursuing professional courses.

This platform provides an opportunity to college and university students to research and present their views on the competition Topic.
